

The extraordinary (extra) points of the head and face have specific, highly targeted clinical actions, often addressing local sensory organ disorders, headaches, and mental-emotional or neurological imbalances 1, 2. Based on classical and modern clinical records, here are the designated actions of each major extra point on the head:

1. Points for Calming the Spirit and Treating Wind (Neurological)

- Sishencong (M-HN-1 - "Four Alert Spirit"): Its primary actions are to calm the spirit, pacify wind, and benefit the eyes and ears 3. It is heavily used for insomnia, epilepsy, mania-depression, poor memory, stroke recovery, and headaches 3, 4.
- Yintang (M-HN-3 - "Hall of Impression"): Acts to pacify wind and calm the shen (spirit), benefit the nose, and activate the channel to alleviate pain 5. It is classically used to soothe anxiety, insomnia, and agitation, as well as to treat frontal headaches, infantile convulsions, and sinus congestion 6.
- Anmian (N-HN-54 - "Peaceful Sleep"): Functionally acts to calm the spirit and pacify the Liver 7. Its principal modern application is the treatment of insomnia, restlessness, palpitations, and hypertension 7, 8.

2. Points for Eyecare and Eye Disorders

- Yuyao (M-HN-6 - Fish Waist): Indicated to benefit the eyes and relax the local sinews to alleviate pain 9. It is selected for eye strain, drooping eyelids (ptosis), twitching of the eyelids, and frontal headaches 9, 10.
- Qiuhou (M-HN-8 - "Behind the Ball"): Its sole designated action is to benefit the eyes 11. It is clinically applied to treat a wide array of eye diseases, including optic nerve atrophy, glaucoma, short-sightedness, and retinitis pigmentosa 12.
- Taiyang (M-HN-9 - "Sun / Supreme Yang"): Works to eliminate wind and clear heat, reduce swelling and stop pain, and activate the channel 13. It is a pre-eminent point for migraine headaches, facial paralysis, toothache, and red, swollen, or painful eye conditions 10, 13.

3. Points for Nasal, Jaw, and Facial Rebalancing

- Bitong (M-HN-14 - "Penetrating the Nose"): Its primary clinical action is to benefit the nose 14. It is a major local point utilized to clear rhinitis, allergic rhinitis, nasal polyps, and congestion 14.
- Jiachengjiang (M-HN-18 - "Adjacent to Container of Fluids"): Acts to eliminate wind, activate the channel, and alleviate pain 15. It is highly effective locally for trigeminal neuralgia, facial paralysis, toothache, and swelling of the gums 15.
- Erjian (M-HN-10 - "Tip of the Ear"): Functionally clears heat, dissipates swelling, and benefits the eyes and throat 16. It is classically pricked to bleed to rapidly drain high fevers, mumps, sore throat, and acute eye swelling 16.

4. Points of the Tongue and Throat (Sublingual)

- Jinjin & Yuye (M-HN-20 - "Golden Liquid & Jade Fluid"): These paired points act to clear heat and reduce swelling, generate body fluids, and benefit the tongue 17. They are primarily pricked to bleed to treat severe tongue swelling, loss of voice (especially post-stroke), mouth ulcers, and severe morning sickness or parched mouth 17, 18.
- Haiquan (M-HN-37 - "Sea Spring"): Like Jinjin and Yuye, it clears heat, reduces swelling, generates fluids, and benefits the tongue 19. It is famously used for a heavy, swollen tongue, facial paralysis, and to treat wasting and thirsting (diabetes-related) dry mouth 19.

5. Neck Region Points

- Bailao (M-HN-30 - "Hundred Taxations"): Acts to transform phlegm and dissipate nodules and stop cough and calm dyspnoea 20. It is clinically selected to treat scrofula, chronic coughing, night sweats, and neck stiffness 20.

📌 If you are interested, we can explore how these extraordinary head points are classically combined with primary meridian points (such as combining Yintang with Hegu and Fengchi) to treat chronic frontal headaches or sleep disorders.